PORTFOLIO MANAGER COMMENTARY

No hope for peace between the US and Iran materialized during the month of September. Demands from each side remain irreconcilable, while fresh strikes hit oil tankers, petroleum infrastructure, and military bases. The US even rejected an Iranian ceasefire proposal late in the month, such that Brent crude rallied sharply over the month, trading between $100 and $110 per barrel.

The central banks' back-to-school meetings were keenly anticipated. Faced with inflation running hot, above target, against a backdrop of a resilient, job-creating economy, the Federal Reserve hiked rates by +25bps, as expected. The ECB and the BOJ also raised their policy rates this month on the back of inflationary pressures, and investors are pricing in further hikes before year-end. This coordinated tightening weighed on 10Y yields, which rose +30/+50bps on the month and +75/120bps over the quarter. Even though CPI and Core PCE prints as of end-September were fairly encouraging and showed signs of easing in the US (alongside a change in calculation methodology), investors remain wary of second-round effects and are growing increasingly uneasy about the large stock of government debt and persistently elevated deficits.

Economic data otherwise stayed fairly mixed and volatile. While ISM Manufacturing and Services indices held in expansion territory, payrolls surprised strongly to the upside (+162k) after the prior month's disappointment, while consumer confidence (Michigan) remains near historic lows.

The sharp rise in long-end yields did not meaningfully weigh on equity markets. Mega-cap tech names and the strength of their latest earnings single-handedly held up US markets (notably Microsoft, Meta). Other global indices were more fragile, with losses of up to -5% on the month. All in, the MSCI World posted a loss of -1.3%.

In this context, our multi-strategy funds posted a positive performance.

Quantitative and systematic strategies delivered a positive month. FX strategies were the main contributor, all alpha having a positive contribution. Rates strategies delivered a slightly positive month.

Implied Volatility strategies had a positive performance as well. Dispersion strategies and Long short positions on rates volatilities posted gains in MtM after July losses. Carry strategies delivered a flat contribution whereas repo positions posted MtM gains.

Hedging positions had a slightly negative contribution this month.
